

68-10-115. Immunity from liability for informing person of potential HIV infection.

A person who has a reasonable belief that a person has knowingly exposed another to HIV may inform the potential victim without incurring any liability. A person making such disclosure is immune from liability for making disclosure of the condition to the potential victim.

[Acts 1993, ch. 322, § 3.]